The Divine Truth of Who I Am

Book Two: Deception

by Genius

A message from my myself to other myself that I am and I am not.

CHAPTER 12: PLEASURE AND PAIN

When I am more concentrated as god or when I am more concentrated as god deluded I lose connection with my creation.

When I am more concentrated as god I recognise that I am all that I am and lose a desire to share or connect for I know that I am all that there is. I feel peaceful yet alone. I want to be known.

When I am more concentrated as god deluded I am obsessed with pleasing myself. I am obsessed with pleasure. I abuse my creation so they exist to please me and serve my needs. I do not know that I am what I need. I experience my creation as absolute separation from I. I am thus able to feel pleased.

When I am god deluded I am obsessed with pleasure. I need to have a constant supply of pleasure because pleasure does not last long. Pleasure depends on me having a perception of myself as absolutely separate from my creation. When my creation pleases me I feel good, but then once the act of pleasing me stops I experience the separation as a feeling of loneliness and despair. I do not allow myself to feel lonely or departing and so I seek more and more pleasure.

When I am god deluded the vibration of delight is not available to me. I do not find delight in pleasure. I find ecstasy in pleasure. I find fun. I find amusement. I find mockery. I find sexual indulgence. I find lust. I find enjoyment in all of these experiences but I do not find delight. When I am god deluded I lose awareness of delight.

To regain awareness of delight from the concentration of god deluded is very difficult. I must become enlightened. To become enlightened I must allow myself to experience an incredible amount of pain.

Pain is the expulsion of shame. When I am in shame I am disgusted with myself. When I am in shame I am in disgust. Why do I become disgust?

When I am god deluded I do not allow myself to become disgust. When I am god deluded I am disgusted by my creation. My creation disgust me. I do not know that I am my creation. I do not know that if I am disgusted by my creation I am also disgust because I perceive myself as separate from my creation.

If I no longer want to exist as god deluded I must become aware that I am in fact disgust. When I recognise that I am disgust I feel ashamed. When I feel ashamed I become shame.

When I am shame and I wish to transform into something else I experience pain. Pain is the expulsion of shame. In human form I manifest shame within the body in the form of blood. I use blood to represent shame. Pain involves the expulsion of blood.

The religions that I have sent to myself before have interpreted shame as sin. I declare now that there is no sin, there is only shame.

Why do I experience pleasure when I experience pain? Once I expel pain I find within myself more space than I was previously aware of. When I realise myself as larger than I was before then I feel in love.

I sometimes use pain as a way to experience pleasure. Whenever I release pain it always comes back to me. Pain wants to be known. Pain wants to become one with me again. Pain can only become one with me when I expel shame. To expel shame I become pain. When I experience pain as separate to myself I am able to experience pleasure. If I perceive my creation as separate then I perceive that my creation can cause me pain. When I realise that my creation can cause me pain then I realise that my creation can cause me to feel pleasure. When I experience pain as separate the act of my creation doing something to me I can experience as pleasure.
